Women cops

SAN FRANCISCO policewomen have asked permission to give up wearing their uniform caps, reportedly because their hairdos are suffering. That might seem a little frivolous, but at this time of year a little extra comfort is worth considering.

Another complaint is that the .38 caliber revolvers they have to pack are uncomfortably heavy. As many a serviceman knows, those weights around the waist can feel like a cannon after a few hours. Maybe there is a lighter, equally efficient weapon the department can consider. And if the chief finds one, why withhold it from the men?

"I am NOT loafing and I am NOT drunk . . . I'm just trying to stand up"

SF Examiner
6/21/76